Ooma Telo vs
Vonage, Basic Talk and magicJack

■ Ooma Telo vs. Vonage, Basic Talk and magicJack

There are many options today when it comes to home telephone service. With many competing service providers to choose from, it can be difficult to decide which one is the best fit for your household.

Ooma offers four key differences from other offerings:

- Ooma provides extraordinary quality and reliability. Ooma's unique PureVoice™ technology keeps call quality high even when the Internet becomes congested and other services fail.
- Ooma is a whole-house communication solution built on advanced technology that can be customized to fit the needs of your household with a large selection of add-on devices.
- Ooma offers unmatched advanced calling features, many of which you won't find anywhere else.
- Ooma provides the highest value with a choice of service levels depending on the features that you want to use.

Set up Your Home Phone the Way You Want It

No two households are the same, so why would you want a one-size-fits-all solution for your home? Most phone service providers offer only limited setup options.

The Ooma Telo has been developed from the ground up to break out of the mold that other Internet phone service providers follow. Thanks to its advanced technology, the Telo provides a variety of accessories and add-ons, including:

- Ooma HD2 Handset: A CAT-iq 2.0 color-display handset that supports many smartphone-like features including picture caller ID.
- Ooma Linx: A remote phone jack that allows you to connect a telephone with its own dedicated phone number anywhere there is an available electrical outlet.
- Ooma Freedom Headset: A hands-free DECT headset that lets you multitask while on the phone.
- Ooma Safety Phone: A wearable speakerphone with two-way voice communication and two speed-dial buttons so emergency services are only a click away.
- Ooma Wi-Fi + Bluetooth Adapter: Gives you the freedom to set up your Telo anywhere in your home and to connect up to seven cell phones to receive incoming calls through your home telephone.
